"The impetus for developing this dissection set with its long fine instruments was to meet the needs for the evolving neurosurgical procedures where smaller and deeper corridors are required, such as for the resection of cavernous malformations in the brainstem and thalamus. When removing a complex lesion deep in the midbrain, I have found that these instruments provide me with the ability to get the job done. They have become an indispensable part of my surgical armamentarium.”

Robert F. Spetzler, M.D.
